

Book of Mormon Study Missionary Guide

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints continues to explore new ways to invite and help people come unto Christ. One of the new advertising offerings is a free Book of Mormon study. Now, when people request a free copy of the Book of Mormon, they can also choose to have a conversation about a specific topic. These conversations use teachings in the Book of Mormon to help people find answers to questions of the soul like “What is the purpose of life?” or practical questions like “How can I strengthen my family?”

When people request a Book of Mormon study, they can choose to discuss one of a variety of topics, which will then be passed along to you. The topics listed below include suggestions for scripture passages and questions to help you prepare for a Book of Mormon study session. Become familiar with the scriptures for each topic. Then be prepared to share a relevant passage from the Book of Mormon as you discuss the topic. The Book of Mormon is “your most powerful resource in conversion” (Preach My Gospel, chapter 5). Help others recognize the Spirit as you teach from the Book of Mormon. Study and apply principles from the “Use the Scriptures” section in Preach My Gospel, chapter 10 as you prepare for each discussion.

A Book of Mormon study is an introductory lesson, designed to help you become acquainted with the people you are teaching, invite the Spirit, and see if they are interested in learning more. As you come to understand their needs and interests, invite them to continue studying the gospel with you. You can help them come closer to the Savior and strengthen their desire to learn more about His restored gospel as you share truths from the Book of Mormon.

When you visit in person, apply “How to Begin Teaching” from Preach My Gospel, chapter 10. Find out why they are interested in talking with you, what they expect from your visit(s), what they believe about religion, what they understand about the Book of Mormon, and what questions they may have.

People may choose to study with the missionaries online or in person. Once a request is received, online missionaries contact the person and help him or her prepare to meet with the missionaries in person. When referrals are sent to local missionaries, online missionaries contact the local missionaries, share information about the person, and share details about the specific advertised offering. Online and local missionaries should work together to help the person have a positive experience with the Church.

Additional Instructions for Teaching

Make sure you follow through with each and every request for a Book of Mormon study. Avoid any approach in the initial visit that might leave the person feeling tricked, such as not providing a message about the requested topic or not introducing the Book of Mormon. You may, however, discuss additional topics and scriptures as needed to clarify your message or answer additional questions.

Try to build a meaningful relationship with each person. As you ask questions and get to know each other, open up and share more about yourself beyond the fact that you are a missionary. Share brief personal experiences from your life and discuss how what you learned from your experience can make a difference in his or her life.

Take a few minutes at the end of the visit to extend a simple, appropriate invitation. For the first visit, you would likely invite the person to continue meeting with you to learn more about the gospel of Jesus Christ. Practice extending invitations during companion study, district council, and zone conferences.
