

Employment Services

Needs

Having employment is an important part of life. Good employment allows individuals to use their talents and provide for themselves and their families. Looking for work can be challenging, and job seekers may feel unsure, anxious, or inadequate. But finding the right job can help someone achieve their career, personal, and financial goals.

Description

Individualized job search coaching and support are available through Employment Services. Individuals can get help by visiting the Church's Employment Services website, found at employment.ChurchofJesusChrist.org. In some areas, they may also visit an employment center for in-person assistance.

Available resources include the following:

- The Active Job Search program. This program provides skill practice, peer support and feedback, accountability, networking, and resource sharing. Groups meet daily, both online and in person.
- Live and online job search skills workshops. These workshops are offered daily and provide professional training on topics such as where to find job leads, résumés, networking, and interviewing.
- One-on-one coaching and support. These are available both in person and virtually.
- Live and online Ask an Expert sessions. These are forums offered each week where individuals may ask specific questions related to his or her job search.
- Monthly webinars highlighting special job search topics.
- Employment resources, such as employers, job leads, and networking contacts.

- Online self-help materials to help individuals in a job search.
- Career exploration and planning assistance.
- Self-employment support and resources such as training, funding information, and mentors.

Who is this for?

Employment Services helps those who are unemployed, underemployed, reentering the workforce, or looking to improve their current employment situation. Services provided are not just for Church members; anyone is welcome to visit the website employment.ChurchofJesusChrist.org or an employment center.
